Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

Martin as a Boy

Martin Luther King Jr. was born on January 15, 1929, in Atlanta, Georgia. He grew up with his mom and dad, his big sister and his little brother. Martin loved to read and to learn new words.

When Martin was a boy, there were unfair rules. The rules kept Black people and white people apart. Black children and white children could not go to the same schools. Martin knew these rules were wrong. He wanted all children to be able to learn and play together.

1 What did Martin love to do?

2 What did Martin want children to do together?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

The Bus

When Martin grew up, he lived in Montgomery, Alabama. In that city, there were unfair bus rules. Black riders had to sit in the back of the bus. Sometimes they had to give their seats to white riders.

One day, a woman named Rosa Parks would not give up her seat. Then Martin helped lead the people. They stopped riding the buses until the rule changed. They walked to work, or shared rides, for more than a year! At last, the rule was changed. Now anyone could sit in any seat.

1 What did the people stop riding?

2 How did many people get to work?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

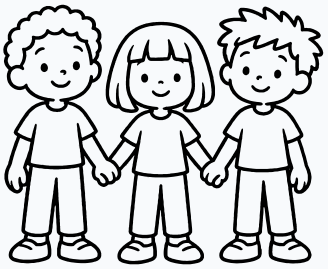

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

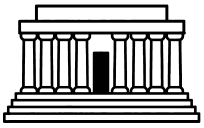

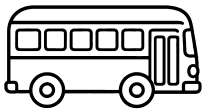

A Big March

Martin believed in peace. He wanted to change unfair rules without fighting.

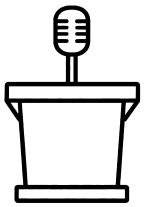

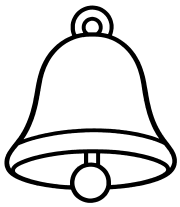

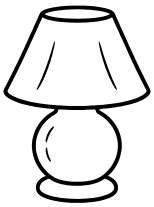

In 1963, about 250,000 people came to Washington, D.C. They marched together, in peace. Martin gave a speech at the Lincoln Memorial. He spoke into a microphone so the big crowd could hear him. He told about his dream: that someday all people would be treated fairly.

1 Where did Martin give his speech?

2 What did Martin speak into?

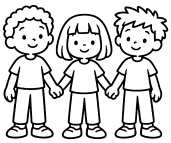

3 What did all the people do together?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

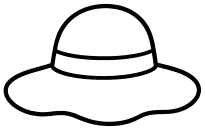

We Remember Martin

In 1964, Martin won a big prize for his work for peace. It is called the Nobel Peace Prize. He kept working to make rules fair for all people.

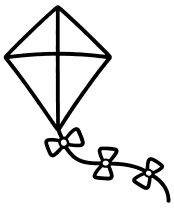

In 1968, Martin was killed. People all over the world were very sad. Now we remember him on Martin Luther King Jr. Day. It comes in January, near his birthday. On that day, many people help others.

1 What did Martin win?

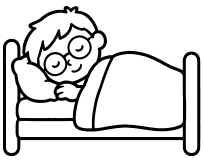

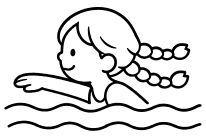

2 What do many people do on his day?

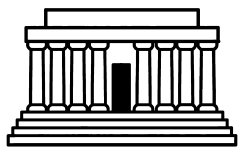

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

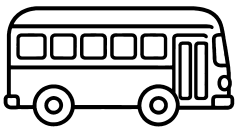

Cut out the pictures. Glue them in the order they happened.

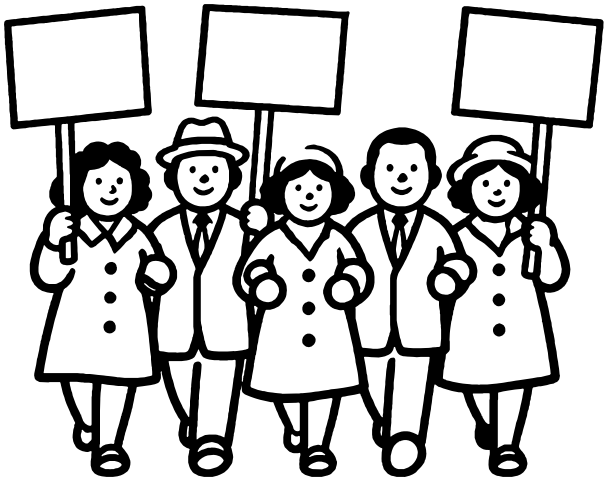

1	2	3	4

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Name _____ Date _____

Martin Luther King Jr.

What did you learn about Martin? Draw and write.

I learned

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

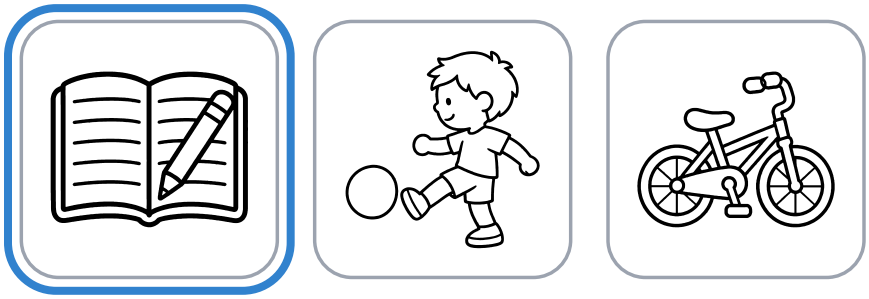

Martin as a Boy

Martin Luther King Jr. was born on January 15, 1929, in Atlanta, Georgia. He grew up with his mom and dad, his big sister and his little brother. Martin loved to read and to learn new words.

When Martin was a boy, there were unfair rules. The rules kept Black people and white people apart. Black children and white children could not go to the same schools. Martin knew these rules were wrong. He wanted all children to be able to learn and play together.

1 What did Martin love to do?

2 What did Martin want children to do together?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

The Bus

When Martin grew up, he lived in Montgomery, Alabama. In that city, there were unfair bus rules. Black riders had to sit in the back of the bus. Sometimes they had to give their seats to white riders.

One day, a woman named Rosa Parks would not give up her seat. Then Martin helped lead the people. They stopped riding the buses until the rule changed. They walked to work, or shared rides, for more than a year! At last, the rule was changed. Now anyone could sit in any seat.

1 What did the people stop riding?

2 How did many people get to work?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Martin Luther King Jr.

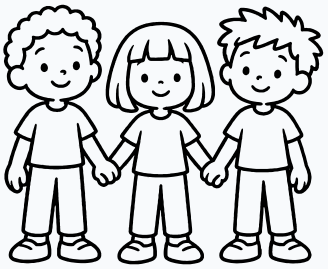

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

A Big March

Martin believed in peace. He wanted to change unfair rules without fighting.

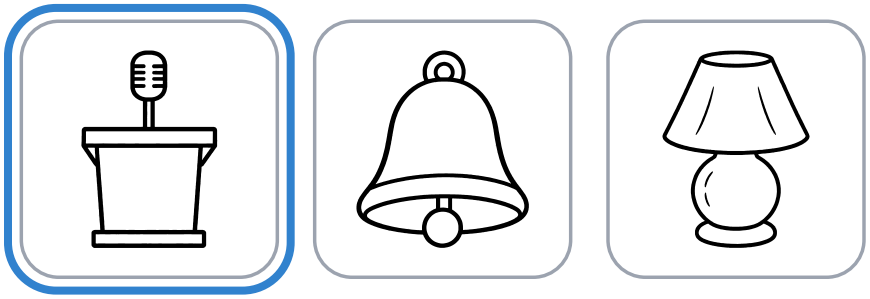

In 1963, about 250,000 people came to Washington, D.C. They marched together, in peace. Martin gave a speech at the Lincoln Memorial. He spoke into a microphone so the big crowd could hear him. He told about his dream: that someday all people would be treated fairly.

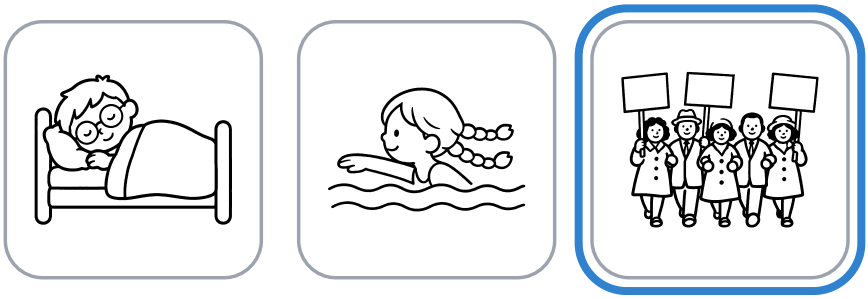

1 Where did Martin give his speech?

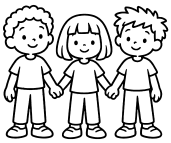

2 What did Martin speak into?

3 What did all the people do together?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Martin Luther King Jr.

Listen to the text. Circle the picture that answers each question.

Read aloud

We Remember Martin

In 1964, Martin won a big prize for his work for peace. It is called the Nobel Peace Prize. He kept working to make rules fair for all people.

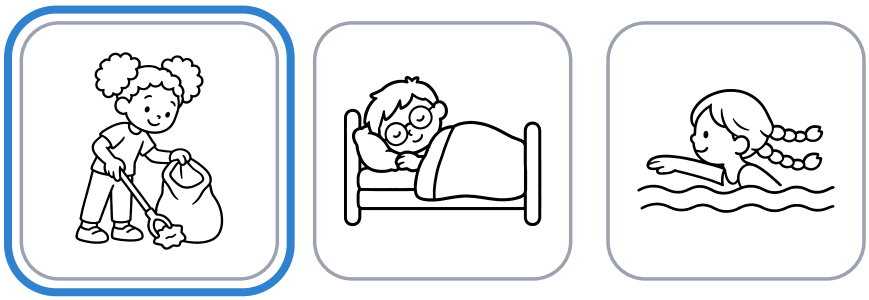

In 1968, Martin was killed. People all over the world were very sad. Now we remember him on Martin Luther King Jr. Day. It comes in January, near his birthday. On that day, many people help others.

1 What did Martin win?

2 What do many people do on his day?

© 2026 Eggroll Games

Martin Luther King Jr.

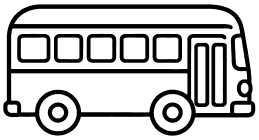

Cut out the pictures. Glue them in the order they happened.

1

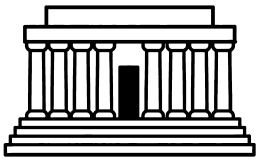

born in Atlanta

2

the bus

3

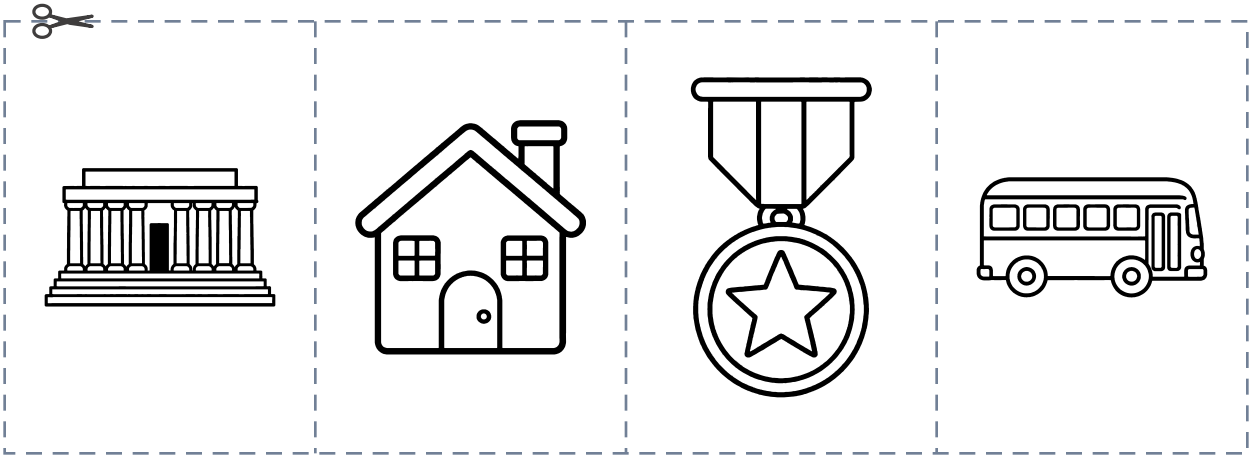

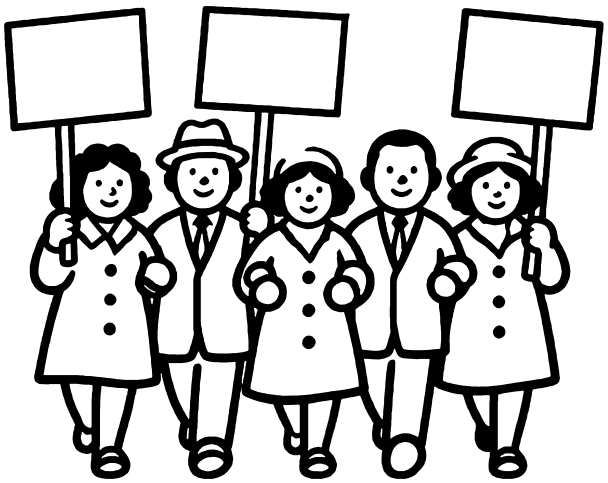

the march

4

the prize

© 2026 Eggroll Games